About Yourself:

Hi, my name is Brianna Martinez. I am from Canjilon New Mexico which is a very small town in northern New Mexico. I am a senior in Rangeland Science. I chose this major because I have a passion for agriculture. I grew up on a ranch and the daughter of a veterinarian which influenced this passion. I also attended New Mexico Youth Ranch Management Camp where I learned about the importance of rangeland management in agriculture. This is where my decision to attend NMSU for range science was made.

Skills:

Map reading, hiking, painting, leathercraft, furniture refurbishment, Microsoft Office skills.

Accomplishments/ Clubs/ other:

NRCT Ambassador Spring 2017

NMSU Range Club Member

Society of Range Management Member

ACES Representative

Career Experiences:

During high school I worked with the Youth Conservation Corps for the Carson National Forest. The summer of 2016, with the help of NRCT, I landed an internship with NRCS in Tucson, Arizona. The greatest work experience one could ask for! I learned how to inventory ranches, collect data, inspected projects, and used software programs and much more.

Plans after Graduation:

After graduation I would like to find a job with NRCS, BLM or US Forest Service. I absolutely loved working with ranchers to make improvements on their rangelands therefore that is what I would want to do.
