About Yourself:

Hi, My Name is Gustavo Alvidrez. I'm from Waipahu Hawaii and raised in La Mesa New Mexico. I am currently an undergraduate at New Mexico State University pursuing a Biology degree. I love being outdoors, rock climbing, and the ocean. I aspire to one day be a marine biologist and work with reef life, or with large marine mammals.

Career Experiences:

During high school I attended a MSUB at UCSC in California for one summer. They focused on marine ecology in which I found my passion. Since then I have been fortunate enough to work for the US Forest Service as a timber technician while pursuing my bachelor's degree. I've had the opportunity to learn how to take water samples, soil samples, population samples, and am awaiting to work as a technician on a parrot research project in Belize.

Plans after Graduation:

After graduation I would like to work with a federal agency such as; U.S. Forest Service, U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service or NOAA. I would love to work with some sort of marine life on a national or international coast. With time plan to attend graduate school in which then I can begin conducting my own research or join a research project involving large marine mammal, or reef studies.
